After a liberal extension of the morning bear to cover an unusually large votance of southne business, the Schutz resumed consideration of the Shorman 3 per cont. bend bill.

Mr. Call reviewed the pending amendments and opposed the bill as premature.

Mr. I award says he regarded the compulsory nature of Mr. Vest amendment as weakening the bill, and the measure itself as timesessing in view of the success of Secretary Windom's operations in continuing the fives and sixes, a transaction which he (Bayard) contended did not involve the change of a contract or the making of a new one, but was simply a voluntary agreement for a chimumtion of the interest rate.

Mr. McPherson replied briefly, and was followed by Mr. Beck.

Mr. Garland at this point, on leave, reported back from the Judiclary Committee the resolution in reference to the extradition of the Italiax, Vincenzo Rebello, with a bill regulating the fees and parcice in extradition cases. The bill proviles for making the less regular, compels the commissioners to hold count in public, and where the secured is poor and cannot afford the cost authorizes the United States to send for this witne

House of Representatives.

At the conclusion of the morning hour the House (at 1:400 went into Committee of the Whole (Mr. Robinson, or Massachusetts, in the chair) on the fortification appropriation bill.

The total amount appropriated is $375,000.

After a short explanation by Mr. Forney, Mr. McCook took the floor and dwelt upon the importance of improving the sea-coast fortifications of the United States.

Mr. Hilscock, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, defended the bill against the strictures of his colleague. He hardly thought that the battle of Dorking was immittent, and that the country was threatened with subjugation. The American people did not think that a foreign was was threatened, or would be for the next sevenity years.

Mr. Atkins also supported the bill, and called at-ention to the fact that two-thirds of the appropria-ion made for fortifications last year were still unexpended.

Mr. Whithorne believed it to be the duty of Congress to provide proper coast defenses, but contained that that could be best accomplished by the negusition of heavy ordinance.

Mr. O'Neill, while advocating the bill, contended that the people were looking forward more anxiously for the appropriations for the improvement of rivers and harbors than for building fortifications.

The bill was then read for amendments.

Mr. McCook moved to increase to $500,000 the appropriation for the protection, &c., of fortifications.

Mr. Research Nr. Regan offered an amendment appropriating 80,000 for the improvement of Galveston Harbor. Ruled out on a joint of order. The committee then rose and reported the bill

The committee then rose and reported the bill to the House, when it was passed.

Mr. Candier called up the report of the Committee on Accounts designating the committees of the House which are entitled to clerks.

Amendments were adopted granting the Committee on Invalid Pensions three and the Committee on Invalid Pensions three and the Committee on Elections one additional clerk.

Mr. Holman offered an amendment striking from the list of committees cuttible to clerks the Committees on Expenditures in the Various Departments, on Public Expenditures, on Militia, on Library, and on Mileage.

Pending action the House fat 4460 adjourned.

COLONEL PERRY CARSON

Tells a Funny Story About Inspiration to Lieutenant Relly.

After Judge Porter had finished his speech yesterday, and white Perry Carson, the guard of the jail van, was wrapping himself up in his overcoat preparatory to starting over to the jail with his listinguished prisoner, he remarked to Police than guined present, he remarked to rottes Lieutenant John F. Kelly, in a quiet and heat-tating way, "There is more in this thing called impiration than most people think." What do you know of inspiration?" asked the Lieutenant.

Perry, pulling on his big gloves, answered

Perry, pulling on his big gloves, answered:

"Some years ago, when I was younger than I am now, it was in 1861 I think, I lived in Baltimore.

I got it into my head that the colored prisoners in the jail there were not treated as they should bein a religious way, I mean. I had heard of persons visiting the white prisoners and giving them that religious consolation which is so healing to the soul. Well, I tasked to two or fifree other young colored men about it, and we decided to go to see the colored prisoners. Arming ourselves with a Bible and a hymn-book we started.
There is no doubt about it. I felt that I was thoroughly inspired, and my whole soul was in the work. Arriving at the jail, we told the guard at the door of our errand, and I, without thinking of the result, told him that I felt an imperation to labor in that direction. The guard did not say anything except: 'Come in.' We went in, and the first thing I knew a couple of fellows had me on a barrel, while auchler was engaged in paddling with a realind earnestness."

"What became of the impiration?' queried the leutenant, seemingly anxious to get at the result.

"I never exactly knew," said Ferry, "I do know, however, that I never engaged in healing difficulties of the soul since. Halle, here comes Guitean, and I must away to the jail." Then Perry, reeing that he had put his foot in it, said to hear about it. Bon't say anything about my inspiration to any one. I don't want Guiteau to hear about it. He don't like me, anyhow, and he may say something about it in court in connection with his Abrahamic theory"

The Lieutenant didtell some one about it, however, and that some one was The Refullican reportor.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

The people of Alexandria have been shocked and astounded at the recent revelations with respect of S. C. Neale, and I, his late law partner, am no less surprised than they. Only a few days before his leaving the city I was apprised of his condition (as it now turns out, partially apprined only), and I at one took steps to ascertain from him the extent of his indebtedness in the local community, and the secretal heaving

In Alexandria, outside of the bank, a deed was prepared and delivered to the First National Bank, protecting it and myself as his accommodation indozer. I never received one deliar's benefit from the obligations that I now propose to assume. Scale's indebtedness is fin integer than he disclosed to me, and much of it of the most sacred character. Under these circumstances I cannot consent to be the sole survivor of the wreck. I cannot consent to avait myself of the deed, and I berefor reasoning for the benefit of his unfortunate neighbors, who, like myself, have been the victims of billed and misphaged conflictness, all the indebtedness therein scenared for my benefit.

I cannot now properly prevent the bank claiming and using the fund which the deed decodes to its benefit, but I can, with a little indiguisee, replace it, and I design this note as an obligation to that effect.
